SUMMARY OF DISTINCTIVE FEATURES OF THE COURSE

Highlight the key features of the course you would wish potential applicants/students to know about which would inform their choice of course.

Course philosophy

To instil students with the skills to be innovative Image makers within the industries of fashion communication.

Fashion Promotion and Imaging is a dynamic course that encourages a balance of skills in the subject of fashion communication. Students can enter in Level 4, experiment with the specialisms before deciding which of the three specific pathway streams to enter in Stage 2. We have now simplified the pathway offering into the following specialisms:

- Fashion Promotion- Marketing/ PR/ Trend prediction
- Fashion Visual Communication- Graphics/ Film/ Print
- Fashion Styling & Photography- Styling/ Photography/ Art Direction

The Pathway specialisms support the student in focusing in one particular area of the industry, while still keeping a broad outlook on Fashion Promotion as a holistic subject area. This flexibility allows for an exciting course, with a view to satisfying employment opportunities in the industry which reflects our impressive alumni. The very nature of which is sustainable and appealing to the involvement within the fashion industry, whilst being embedded in the School of Fashion at UCA.

Our unique selling point is the image making specialism which works within the areas of graphics, film and printmaking. The practical nature of FPI encourages students' full participation in the course as it inevitably leads to engaging in industry. The more the participation the stronger the engagement and the better chances students have in getting jobs in industry at the end of the course. Due to the broad approach we can reflect current practice in industry and support our students in their requirements for future employment. We are proud of our alumni and invite graduates to talk about their experiences as well as showcasing their portfolios and encouraging opportunities with current students.

Lecturers on the Fashion Promotion and Imaging course are all involved in practice within the industry. They bring with them a wealth of knowledge about current industry practice as well as giving the course the dynamism that inevitably drives its pace in the ever-changing nature of Fashion Communication.

LEARNING, TEACHING AND ASSESSMENT

Include reference to the following in connection to the course, where appropriate: PDP, online learning, independent learning, exchange, placement, employability and employer engagement.

Learning and Teaching Strategy

Within BA (Hons) Fashion Promotion and Imaging learning and Teaching strategy we integrate the following methods:

PDP: Although not officially coined as PDP from September 2012, the course encourages Personal development through regular one to one tutorials, end of year reviews and through encouraging students to keep assessment feedback.

Online Learning: Within Year 2, online learning takes place via an online blog of which students reflect on their work placement within a professional context. We also encourage students to respond to their feedback on their MY UCA profile page learning through their feedback strengths and recommendations for future improvements.

Independent Learning: This comes into play through encouraging students to understand and plan their time management to assist with the balance of projects to progress to year 3. We also encourage this through specifying the independent learning hours expected on the projects within the briefing. In year 3 we ask students to plan out their projects via a calendar system of which personal tutors assist students to project management. Time management is also a learning outcome on the majority of FPI assessments.

Exchange: We actively encourage Erasmus exchanges on the course and prepare students for this opportunity in year 1, term 3 with portfolio support and organising previous student talks. In 2014/15 we have five students embarking on exchange programmes with IED Milan and RMIT Melbourne. The CL also visited two students at AMFI in June 2014 in order to make recommendations for future students.

Placement: As a course we strongly believe in the placement programme on FPI and help support students with CV workshops, mock interviews and Internship opportunities for all three pathways on the course.

Employability/ Employer engagement: As per the placement, employability is key to the philosophy and aims of BA (Hons) Fashion Promotion and Imaging. We connect in Year 3 with supporting students to apply for competitions, graduate schemes and through assessing a target audience for portfolio completion. This is also the case for employer engagement with graduates showing portfolios to current students and through encouraging open calls for opportunities from industry contacts. The Fashion First event in both 2013/ 14 and 2014/15 also assisted employer engagement with Marks and Spencer and ASOS.

Assessment Strategy

PDP: Personal development is encouraged through students responding to their assessment feedback. Within Year 2 students are assessed on their self-reflection on their studio work through sketchbooks, evaluations and peer assessment.

Independent Learning: Time management is an assessment criteria on the majority of FPI assessments.

Placement: The work placement is assessed as part of a self-reflective blog and professional employers report of which we encourage students to keep for employability in year 3.

Employability/ Employer engagement: Across all three years students are assessed on their professionalism, which can be looked at from an employability perspective. This also comes into play with Year 3 with the added assessment criteria of project management and commitment to the subject.
